

Dr. Fidelma McCorry completed a PhD at the University of Adelaide, with a thesis titled Contemporary Irish Migration to Australia, 2000-2015: Pathways to permanence which was awarded a Dean's Commendation for Doctoral Thesis Excellence and the John Lewis Silver Medal for Geography 2018.

She was a University Postdoctoral Fellow at the Hugo Centre for Migration and Population Research at the University of Adelaide. Her interest in migration, particularly the global movement of the Irish, stems from a lived experience of repeat and frequent migration. She is an active member of the SA Irish Community and the Irish Australian Chamber of Commerce.

Fidelma is currently Research Manager for the Centre of Research Excellence in Translating Nutritional Science to Good Health at the University of Adelaide.
